Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

THE second week of the special session which was called for the particular purpose of refunding Arkansas' highway debt finds the legislature doing everything else BUT. While Arkansas continues in the unenviable and unnecessary position of the only one of 48 states to default on her obligations, the legislature busies itself with a tax on wine, a scheme to set up state liquor stores, and an investigation of the penitentiary.

Police Closing in on Outlaw Gangs of the Southwest

Elmer Inman, Underhill's Pal, Captured Near Bowlegs, Okla.

UNDERHILL IS DEAD
Tri-State Terror Succumbs to 13 Bullet Wounds

SEMINOLE, Okla.—(P)—Shortly after Wilbur Underhill, "tri-state terror," died of 13 bullet wounds in the McAlester penitentiary hospital, one of his confederates, Elmer Inman, was wounded and captured near Bowlegs early Sunday, further reducing the roll of the Southwest's fugitive bad men.

Inman, one-time confederate of Ray Terrill, member of the now decimated Terrill gang of killers and robbers, escaped temporarily from a posse of Seminole officers after a midnight raid on a rooming house here, but was wounded during the chase that followed. Doctors said he would lose the left eye.

Woman Is Arrested
He was arrested with Grace Cunningham, a Seminole underworld character, who fled with him by motor car. Lena Nichols, sister of Eva Mae Nichols, fatally wounded when Underhill was captured at Shawnee eight days ago, was arrested at the rooming house.

Underhill, narcotic addict and killer, fatally wounded in the gun fight with officers who surprised him in his Shawnee hide-out, died 12 hours after he had been taken in a machine-gunned ambulance from a Shawnee hospital to the better fortified prison hospital. His body will be shipped to Joplin, Mo., for burial. His aged mother, Mrs. Almira Underhill and his unmarried sister of Kansas City hurried to McAlester Sunday.

Mother Blames Officers
"I wish they had not brought Wilbur to McAlester when they did," sobbed the mother. "If they had not moved him when they did, he might have lived. I just begged them to let Wilbur stay in the Shawnee hospital a few days longer."

The United States Bureau of Identification said at Washington it had ordered Underhill transferred because of rumors of a plot to deliver him.

The most notorious underworld characters now sought in Oklahoma are Ed Davis, only remaining fugitive in the band of 11 men who broke from the Kansas state prison at Lansing last Memorial Day; Clyde Barrow, who recently narrowly escaped capture near Dallas, Texas, and fled to this state; Fred Bradshaw, wanted in Oklahoma and Arkansas, and Charles (Pretty Boy) Floyd.

Arthur Finnegan Is Buried Sunday

Columbus Man, 46, Laid to Rest in Blackland Cemetery

Funeral and burial services for Arthur Finnegan, 46, were held Sunday afternoon in Blackland cemetery, near Toltel.

He died Saturday at his home in Columbus. He had been ill only a few days.

Surviving are his widow, five children, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Owen Finnegan of Washington. Two brothers, Jim and McNab, and Delbert of Hensley, Ark.

Three sisters, Mrs. A. F. Yarbrough, Mrs. Zora Ray and Mrs. Claude Corn, all of Washington.

Foreigners Leave Chinese Province

They Flee From Interior of Fukien to Safety on Coast

HONG KONG, China.—(P)—The city of Anuy, in the rebellious province of Fukien, reported Monday that all foreigners had left the interior of the province for the coast.

The United States informed the Nationalist government last week it would hold it responsible for the safety of American lives and property in Fukien province.

WOMAN HURT ON 67

Acreage Meet Here at 2 Tuesday

Contract Signing Begins Wednesday
Patmos, Sp'g. Hill

Meetings Simultaneously at Shover, Fulton, Columbus and Others

HERE ARE ANSWERS
County Agent Presents Some Typical Questions for Farmer

Plans for the 1934 cotton acreage reduction campaign in Hempstead county will be formulated at a meeting of all county and community committee men to be held at the city hall at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, County Agent Frank Stanley announced.

Signing of acreage reduction contracts will start Wednesday at Patmos, Spring Hill, Shover Springs, Fulton, Columbus, Washington Ozan, Blevins, McGaskill Bingen and the county agent's office at Hope.

Committeemen will be given instructions at the meeting Tuesday afternoon which will aid farmers in signing up for the 1934 program.

Information producers should have when they go to sign contracts:

1. Number of acres of cotton planted from the year 1928 through 1932.
2. Number of bales produced each year.
3. Weight of each bale.
4. Complete description of land, including land numbers.

Questions and Answers
Here are some questions and answers dealing with the cotton control campaign:

What does the contract require of the producer in regard to cotton acreage reduction?

Reduce his cotton acreage on the land now in his farm or farms for the 1934 crop year by an amount of from 35 to 45 per cent, and for the 1935 crop year not to exceed 25 per cent below the average planted to cotton on such land in the base period.

Why was the period 1928-32 adopted as the base period for the Cotton belt?

A study of different periods indicates that the 1928-32 period is the most nearly representative of cotton production for the cotton belt as a whole.

Can a contract be signed covering a farm on which cotton has not been grown during the base period?

No; except in a case where the producer is an owner, landlord, cash tenant or managing share tenant and who fulfilled an acreage reduction contract with the Secretary of Agriculture in 1933 and will farm land in 1934 on which such a contract was fulfilled provided the reduction shall not be less than 2 acres, and provided further that, on land planted to cotton for any of the periods specified, the average production shall not be less than 100 pounds of lint cotton per acre.

Can a contract be signed covering an idle or abandoned farm?

No.

Can a contract be signed covering a farm on which cotton has never been grown?

No.

Is a new farmer who wants to start producing cotton eligible to sign the contract?

Yes, if he is farming land which is eligible under the contract; otherwise the answer is "No."

Will each farm be inspected and measured to see that the required cotton acreage reduction actually is made and that other terms of the contract are complied with?

Yes, inspection and measurements are necessary before the second payment for the 1934 or 1935 can be certified.

How is each producer's acreage and production determined?

From his own reports, which are checked by the community and county committees.

Is any evidence of production required?

If there is any question as to the accuracy of the producer's figures, gin or sales records may be called for as proof of production.

Is it necessary for the producer to employ outside help in making out the contract?

No, the County Agent and the county and community committees will provide all the necessary help.

West Coast Heartily for the Blue Eagle

A million men put back to work... that's George Creel's estimate of what NRA has done for the Pacific coast region which centers on San Francisco and its famous Golden Gate.

Million Men Return to Jobs In Far West

Big Business in California Rallying to the National Recovery Act

This is the sixth of a series of articles on "America Under the Blue Eagle," a series written exclusively for NEA Service newspapers, after a 5,000-mile journey of survey to the nation's principal centers of population, showing the situation after six months' operation of the recovery program.

BY JOHN PIPER
NEA Service Special Correspondent

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif.—The "Blue Eagle" is flying high over the states of the Pacific coast. Industrialists, labor leaders, and the consuming public have accepted his visitation with open arms.

He is here to stay; no doubt about that. Strong individualists who had hoped that the time would come when they might take a pot shot and bring him down gradually are lining up to pay him homage.

Conflicts there are, but they are being ironed out rapidly. Opposition there is, but it is waning.

Here and there you hear a banker of the old school grunt disapproval of what he terms governmental interference. Instances have developed where large employers of labor have sought to behave under the ancient laws of rugged individualism—the only rules of business conduct they ever learned.

But they are beginning to see the light. Their associates, their own trade organization, their Chambers of Commerce, are teaching them that a new regime has stepped in and repealed the "dog eat dog" philosophy of doing business.

Thousands Get Work
Statistics tell the story of NRA's success in the Pacific coast states. Men put back to work, payrolls increasing, store sales advancing, bank deposits gaining, are facts which cannot be denied.

Just how much of the improvement is due to NRA it is impossible to determine, but it is significant that almost everyone concerned is willing to give the "Blue Eagle" the credit.

George Creel, dynamic chairman of the National Labor Board on the coast, estimates that the NRA has put 1,000,000 men and women back to work in this region.

His figure is higher than some other estimates, and may be too optimistic, but Creel bases his data on reports from county compliance boards all over his district.

E. Tilden Mattox, district compliance director of the NRA here, said 300,000 had been re-employed under the codes in California, Nevada and Utah alone.

Add Millions to Payroll
Mattox declared payrolls in northern California and Nevada alone have

Dodging Refunding, Legislature Votes for 'Investigation'

Futrell Appeals for Action—House Yearns to Go on a Trip

WILL LOOK AT PEN

Supreme Court Upholds Wason Against Attorney General

LITTLE ROCK.—(P)—The Arkansas house voted overwhelmingly Monday for a legislative investigation of the administration of the state prison system.

The vote was preceded by a debate in which one member charged the prison superintendent had made "a hippodrome and a circus" of the execution of prisoners.

The investigation was called for in a resolution introduced in the house Monday afternoon by Harris, of Jefferson county, and Hardin, of Lincoln.

Governor Demands Action

LITTLE ROCK.—(P)—Governor Futrell in a statement to the legislature Monday strongly urged a bond refunding agreement to avert ruin for the state.

He suggested five ways in which sufficient revenue could be raised to make successful the bond refunding entered into by representatives of the state and the bondholders, and now embodied in bills pending in each house.

He suggested as possible revenue sources: the county "dumb-buck," or part of it; an increase in the gasoline tax; abolition of refunds except to agriculture; a tax on natural gas; modification of license fees on automobiles or substitution of present laws by abolition of 4 per cent gross tax with a mileage tax law to be substituted.

LITTLE ROCK.—(P)—Authority to appoint attorneys for liquidating agents of closed banks lies with the state bank commissioner and not the attorney general, the Arkansas Supreme Court held Monday.

The court upheld Commissioner Marion Wason in the naming of DuVal L. Perkins as attorney for the American-Exchange Trust company.

Cooking School to Be the Best Ever

Opens at Saenger Theater a Week From Tuesday

"The Happy Kitchen"

That's just what The Star will show hundreds of housewives in Hope on January 16-19 at the Saenger theater.

The modern kitchen is not one of drudgery—never! There's life, variety and color and the spice of tangy foods for the housewife.

"Where there used to be just a succession of work-a-day chores, there now romance and the adventure of discovery—or there should be," declares Mrs. Martha McDonald, famed for her knowledge of cookery and her exposition of the ever-changing styles in foods.

Mrs. McDonald comes here to conduct the biggest and greatest cooking school The Star has yet sponsored.

And remember—it's all absolutely free and there's not a thing to be sold.

Everywhere the noted home economist has presented her cooking school demonstrations she declares she found an ever-increasing interest in the problem of cookery and in the constant delving for "what's new in the kitchen."

"As for women losing interest in their homes—bosh!" Mrs. McDonald writes. And just to fill that demand for ideas new and different, The Star is bringing you the "Happy Kitchen."

Epicureans for ages back—ever since Friend Husband stopped tearing his dinner from the bones of a Pleistocene bear and eating it raw—have hailed the mistress of the kitchen and the happiness a fine-cooked and fine-served dinner can bring.

Have You a Dog in Your Home? If so you will be interested in a special Dog Column which is to start in next Sunday's Chicago Herald and Examiner. This column edited by Roger Phillips, internationally famous as a judge and breeder of dogs will appear every Sunday in the Chicago Herald and Examiner.

Scandal

Among the ministers and deputies reported involved in France's latest sensation, the fraudulent collapse of the Credit Municipal, or city pawnshop of Bayonne, is Albert Dalmier (above), Minister of Colonies. Dalmier is said to have urged insurance firms a year ago to invest money in municipal pawnshop bonds, which in the Bayonne case, are reported to have defrauded French investors to the tune of more than $31,000,000.

French Syndicate Head Shoots Self

Cabinet Scandal Threatens in 31-Million-Dollar Fraud

CHAMONIX, France.—(P)—Serge (Handsome Alex) Slavsky, founder of the defunct Bayonne Pawnshop, shot himself in the head Monday when police discovered him.

At first believed dead, Slavsky showed signs of life, and a physician was hastily summoned.

Slavsky later lapsed into a coma and the physician said he believed the wound would be mortal.

Serge Slavsky was wanted by French police in a 31-million-dollar investment fraud practiced against small investors in France and elsewhere on the continent.

Kidnap Band Chief Is Shot to Death

Handsomeness Jack Klutas Is Slain in Raid on Hideout

CHICAGO.—(P)—Theodore (Handsome Jack) Klutas, desperado and leader of a kidnap band that has preyed upon gamblers and others in the middlewest for years, was shot to death when state's attorneys police raided his hideout in suburban Bellwood Saturday.

Seven men were captured by the raiders, one of them identified as Walter Dietrich, escaped convict and member of the notorious Dillinger gang of Indiana outlaws.

Several machine guns, tear gas and a quantity of ammunition was seized in the bungalow where Klutas roamed and where he posed to the owner as a government secret service agent. Klutas was mowed down as he came out of the bungalow and reached for a pistol in defiance of the commands of officers to surrender.

Mrs. J. L. Wilks, Longview, Injured in Auto Collision

Coupe Passes Truck Safely But Runs Into Trailer, West of Hope

ON WAY TO TEXAS

Tourists Collide With Little Rock Fruit Freight

Mrs. J. L. Wilks, 40, of Longview, Texas, was seriously hurt Sunday night when her automobile crashed into a truck-trailer on the Hope-Fulton highway.

Her husband and his sister, Miss Josephine Wilks, 18, escaped with minor cuts and bruises. Their car, a light coupe, was demolished.

Mrs. Wilks received numerous lacerations about the face and head. The most severe cut started at the top of the forehead and extended almost to the chin, splitting her nose. She received a broken jaw and an injured shoulder blade. Several teeth were knocked out.

The party had been visiting in Newport, Ark., and were returning home. The accident occurred shortly before 9 o'clock.

The truck was occupied by Ray Robinson, who gave police his address as 1400 Honyer street, Little Rock. Mr. Robinson was returning to Little Rock with a load of oranges he had purchased in the Rio Grande valley. Police reported the truck and trailer lights to be in good order.

The Wilks car did not strike the truck, but crashed into the trailer.

A Hope, Tex., newspaper says "a foulance went awry, but passing motorists stopped and brought the injured to Josephine hospital."

The Wilks family were brought in by another party of Texas tourists, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Wood, of Gregton, and Mr. and Mrs. C. Crossfield, Longview.

Scanning New Books

By BRUCE CATTION

"L'Affaire Jones," by Hillel Bernstein, is a hilarious and intelligent satire—a jovial farce-comedy built on a thorough understanding of the quirks and oddities of Franco-American relations.

It tells about a young chap from Georgia, one Jones, who goes to Paris to write a book about French cookery. One day he accidentally takes the wrong coat from a cafe. A gendarme comes to get the coat; Jones, trying to explain, suddenly finds himself involved in a terrific argument about the war debts and Verdun. The author explains, in simply because all arguments between Frenchmen and Americans swing to the war debts and Verdun sooner or later. But Jones doesn't understand. The argument waxing warm, the cafe crowd gets hostile and Jones finally is hauled off to jail, suspected of being a dangerous foreign spy.

The coat itself is forgotten. The case becomes the celebrated "Affaire Jones," and though no one knows what it is all about, the entire French nation gets inflamed over it.

The nation's nerves are involved. Jones finds himself the villain of the hour.

Finally, after much trouble, the matter gets cleared up and Jones is released. Then he learns that the whole business was a swokescreen, wilfully pumped up by the government to divert attention from a certain deal that is being put over with a visiting oriental potentate.

And Jones reluctantly comes to admit the French; they never need watching quite so much, he concludes, as when they seem the dullest—for at such moments they invariably are dealing somebody some cards from the bottom of the deck.

Published by Stokes, "L'Affaire Jones" sells for $2.50.

If you haven't yet got around to reading "Britain's Master Spy," it might pay you to get hold of a copy. The story contains a pretty fair dose of thrills.

Its central figure is Sidney Reilly, and the book consists of his own writings, edited and completed by his wife. Or perhaps one should say "his widow." For where Reilly himself is no one seems to know. He may be alive, hidden in some Siberian prison; he may be 10 years dead.

Reilly was a British secret service agent, assigned to Russia during the revolutionary period. After the Bolsheviks seized power, he set to work organizing a counter-revolution which would overthrow Lenin and get Russia back into the war on the side of the Allies.

In Moscow and Petrograd he laid elaborate plans. A corps of ex-officers in the imperial army was organized. The Lettish guards about the Kremlin were to be bribed. Lenin and Trotsky were to be imprisoned.

Everything was ready—and then, at the last minute, the plot was exposed and stamped out, and Reilly had to flee Russia with a price on his head.

For four or five years thereafter Reilly traveled about Europe and America, keeping in touch with anti-Bolshevik circles. Finally, in 1922 or 1923, he was induced to make another trip to Moscow. There he vanished, and nothing has been heard of him since. It generally is supposed that he was executed; Mrs. Reilly is convinced that he still lives in some distant prison.

This story—curiously dated, with its assumption that the Russians are history's worst friends—is offered by Harpers for $2.75.

Emily Post Please Okay

Q—What should a hostess say in greeting a guest arriving at a reception?

A—Any casual inquiry like "Was my husband over to Gus's when you left?" will do.

A—Not unless it is done to guard the chin in case the other guy should take a swing at it.

Q—Should a man ever tuck his napkin in the top of his vest?

A—Never. It should always be tucked in the collar, then he won't spill gravy on his tie, shirt or vest.—Ed Scanlan in the Buffalo Evening News.

YOUR CHILDREN

"Now then, here we are, Patsy," said Patsy's nurse, setting the tray holding her charge's dinner on the nursery table. "Lots of good food to eat to make Patsy grow up into a big fine girl."

Fatsy said nothing but opened up her doll trunk and began stuffing in Lois-May-Anne-Jane-Lou, head, legs, arms and all including also Lois-May-Anne-Jane-Lou's large straw hat.

"Oh, don't do that. You're ruining your dolly!" shrieked Nurse. "Stop it at once or I'll call your mother. Come on, now," she said with suddenly changing tone. Let's have a nice party and see how much of this lovely vegetable soup and junket you can eat. And see the lovely, lovely nice boiling meat. Oh goodie! I wish I had some nice boiling meat like that. Um-m, yum-m!"

She laid out the dishes, got Patsy into her small chair and pulled up her own beside her.

"Here we are," she chirped. "We put this nice napkin across Patsy's knees, just like a lady, and—Oh Patsy, don't do that! Bad, naughty girl! Ladies don't throw their napkins on the floor. There! No, don't tuck it in your neck either. That's the way Susan did with you. I guess. Well, it isn't polite. You must learn to eat properly and not spill things on your dress. You must always keep your napkin in your lap, unfolded once. Stop stiffening out your legs, you little dev—rascal. Be a nice girl now. Oh, do taste this lovely soup."

Manners Come Later
"Oh, just a spoonful. See! Um-m, yum-m! Here, Patsy, taste the soup. Don't click your teeth on the spoon. And never, never turn a spoon upside down in your mouth. Here, Nurse show you. Take some soup in your spoon and then eat it. Don't smack your lips. Don't gargle. Great heavens, you little pig, stop that. Patsy Jones, if you dare to stoop and drink that soup out of your dish like a gutter pup I'll certainly smack you. Hee, take the spoon, darling, and taste the lovely carrots and celery and tomatoes. And oh, here's a dear little barley grain. Up-a-dee! There! Fatsy ate up the dear little barley grain. Oh, you must eat it ALL! You can't just fish out barley grains with your fingers. Ugh! Nasty!"

"Well, that's enough dinner. We'll get on our things and go out for a walk now."

The big things about any little child's meal are peace, silence, and to get the food inside. Manners are not important at three. They'll come along by-and-by. Don't worry.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

©1933 BY NEA SERVICE INC.

Correct sitting posture applies to the girl who works in an office as well as to the woman whose activities are largely social.

If you have hours and hours of typing ahead of you you'll get through it more quickly and certainly more easily if you put your feet directly in front of you, flat on the floor. Sit back until the base of your spine touches the back of the chair and then straighten out your spinal column, neck and head into one straight line.

Don't get too near the typewriter. Give your arms a chance to work freely.

If typing isn't in your schedule and you don't have to sit at your desk for more than half an hour at a time, go ahead and cross your legs. Just remember that it's tiring if you have to sit in one chair for hours at a stretch.

Holding a book in your lap while reading is a bad gesture. Your head can't be upright if you have to let your chin rest on your chest in order to see the print. Hold the book upward and on a comfortable level with your eyes.

And sitting down is no sign to let the muscles of your stomach sag. They should be pulled in and up just the same as they are when you are standing or walking.

NEXT: Health and beauty.

Married Flirts

BEGIN HERE TODAY

QUESTIONS MORRIS and TOM WEAVEN are married on the same day as LILA PROVERBIAL and MURKIN BLISS. The couple live in New York. Tom's obvious cure at this moment, was to walk "around the corner" in matter of some five blocks) with her. He didn't. He rang the doorbell on the house-phones and asked him to have a taxi round in fifteen minutes. He and Gypsy saw Vera to the elevator, and Tom's arm was around Gypsy's slender waist.

After a hard day she rushes home to find Tom already there. He announces that Vera is coming to call that evening.

NEW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER IV

AN affected voice gushed, "So this is Gypsy!"

The newcomer was tall—almost as tall as Tom. She was honey-blond, with elaborately lashed and mascaraed eyes. Everything about her Gypsy, quite naturally, disliked on sight. Her high-strapped, high-heeled shoes; her magpie costume of black and white, which fitted her rounded figure like the proverbial glove; her cooing accents. "And your little place—quite sweet." Vera turned a condescending gaze upon the apartment which had seemed, only last evening, rare perfection in the bride's eyes.

Vera lolled elegantly upon the day bed, and Tom ran to fetch pillows from the bedroom to make her more comfortable. Gypsy sat up-right on one of the stiff Windsor chairs, wishing she would go, wishing the night would open and swallow her. If only, hateful girl! Wasn't it enough that she had preyed Tom for luncheon that day, without having her wished upon them at night? But she was going back to Boston soon, Tom had pleaded; she had so wanted to meet his wife.

"Yes, she does," Gypsy had said, lightly and humorously. "Honestly, darling," Tom had been hurt, bewildered by the frigidly of the atmosphere. Why, he had never seen Gypsy like this before! She'd always been easy and friendly with everyone. It just wasn't like her to turn crabby all of a sudden, for no good reason. Something of this he said, in clumsy male fashion.

Gypsy smiled. "I like that. 'No good reason.'" Then Gypsy had relented. Her natural amiability had come to the surface. She had said, equably: "Never mind, darling. I'll be sweet to her. I'll be nice. I promise."

Tom had been satisfied. He had been more than that, delighted. And now Gypsy was slowly congealing again, in Vera's presence, in spite of all her good resolutions. "If she'd stop calling him 'Tommy' I could bear it," Gypsy thought. "If she'd stop fluttering her hands about him, touching his arm." But no, Vera was of that great army of coquettes. She must be forever bridling, smiling, cooing at a man. With her in the room Gypsy simply did not exist. She monopolized all attention. She needed a footstool. She needed a light. She might also just have one teeny-weeny sip of water?

GYPSEY said, with suspicious brightness, that Tom mustn't get up, she'd get it herself. In the kitchen she ground her teeth and collected her forces. She recognized the fact that she had no weapons against an adversary of this sort unless she selected kindred tactics. She might, for example, go and sit on Tom's knee. . . . that would be quite in the little bride tradition. But oh, how revolting!

"I won't do it," said Gypsy. She couldn't help smiling to herself at the picture. She ran the water furiously and went to the refrigerator for ice cubes.

"Horrid creature!" She jammed at the ice compartment as though ramming hot irons down Vera's spine.

"What on earth are you doing?" It was Tom in the doorway, a slightly mystified and ever so slightly bored Tom. Gypsy, recognizing his expression, tingled to her very toes with delight.

"Nothing at all. Just getting ice."

He took her by the shoulders. He marched her to the door.

"Look here, you run back there and talk to Vera. I'll do the dirty work." He kissed the back of her neck. "You little devil, you!"

Gypsy gave him a gamin grin.

"O. K., boss."

She went back and talked to Vera, sedately and politely. Vera turned off charm when the male left the scene. Gypsy had known she was that sort of girl. Vera went into the bedroom to freshen her makeup. When Tom appeared, with the belated water and three tall frosted glasses, Vera said that really, she must go. A boy from Princeton—a heavy date—was stopping by at her cousin's house at eleven. She really must dash. They would go night-clubbing, probably.

"She's making that up," said Gypsy, to herself, demure in her triumph. "She found she wasn't getting anywhere with Tom and so she's leaving."

But would Tommy get her a taxi? That was what Vera wanted to know. It was just around the corner, really, but she was afraid to be out alone in New York. Tom's obvious cure at this moment, was to walk "around the corner" in matter of some five blocks) with her. He didn't. He rang the doorbell on the house-phones and asked him to have a taxi round in fifteen minutes. He and Gypsy saw Vera to the elevator, and Tom's arm was around Gypsy's slender waist.

"Well!" He drew out a big, fine handkerchief, mopping his brow in the fashion of movie comedians, after negotiating a difficult job.

"I don't believe you like your old friends," Gypsy said, picking up a laden ashtray. "I think you were glad she left."

"Gosh, what gets into females, anyhow?" Tom demanded. "She seemed all right at noon-time, good fun. Tonight she was entirely different, she was putting on an act. Why did you run out on me? I gave you all the signals."

"I wanted to give her a chance to be charming," said Gypsy, suppressing a smile. "I seem to be cramp her style. She was probably just the same at noon, but you didn't notice it. Just now you were seeing her through my eyes."

"Is that the way?" Tom registered amazement. "Wonderful things, marriage!"

"Oh, Tom, I do love you!" Gypsy exploded into a fit of helpless laughter, burrowing into his tweed collar like a kitten. With Vera gone, everything was all right again. They could thump the upholstery of the day bed, empty the trays of lipstick stained cigarette ends, and pretend she had never been there.

SUNDAYS were the best, Gypsy found. During the week, the young Weavens parted in rather a flurry. In the evenings, people usually dropped in, or they read books from the lending library, or went to a picture show. Sunday was all theirs, free and golden and generous. Occasionally they went out to Blue Hills on Saturday night, to waken late in the big, shabby guest room, with the red maple outside. They would have a late breakfast, with Clytie generous in the matter of hot cakes and syrup. Mrs. Morell seemed brighter on these occasions, and Gypsy's father would beam contentedly at them from behind his glasses.

"What's the program today, kids?"

"I don't know," Gypsy would say.

"What's planned, mother?"

"Nothing but, a 1 o'clock dinner," that lady would reply, contentedly. "You drive me to church, father, and after that I'd like to stop at the cemetery. It's Mother's anniversary, you know. Just you and Tom do as you please, dear. You work hard all week. If you want to be here for dinner, we'd love it. But if you'd rather plunk, why Clytie will fix a basket for you."

So, occasionally they plunked, just the two of them, on a high hill, with the bright blue skies of late October overhead. It was fun—it was glorious fun. Later they would tool the little car back to Blue Hills, and have tea with the family in the early dusk. There would be a roaring open fire. Some of Gypsy's friends might drop in, to explain over Clytie's chocolate cake. The twins would squabble over their bicycles. And some hours later, tired and utterly content, they would say goodby and be driven down to the station by Harvey Morell.

"He out next week, Gyp?"

"I think so, Dad. Unless Tom has to work. It's been such fun. You're too good to us."

"Don't be silly." He would kiss her and shake Tom's hand and watch until they climbed aboard. Then he would stomp and shake his shoulders and drive away. Seemed funny to have Gypsy alone. Seemed funny to have Gypsy alone. Seemed funny to have Gypsy alone. Well, that was life. They grew up and got married. You wanted them to, of course, but—well—it was funny, anyhow.

ONE Sunday morning, early in November, Gypsy's mother tossed over to her the page containing the society column of the newspaper.

"I see Lila's back."

"Oh, really?" Gypsy scanned the item with interest. Mr. and Mrs. Derek Van Renter Bliss had returned from a honeymoon abroad, said the society editor, and would be at home after the fifteenth in a duplex at 333 East — Street.

"Why, that's only two blocks away from us," Gypsy said, surprised.

"I suppose you will be seeing her quite a lot," surmised Mrs. Morell, gently.

"I wouldn't do to tell Mums, Gypsy thought, that while she and Lila lived only two blocks apart geographically, the social gap was wider. It wasn't too likely that their circles would touch.

But she was wrong about that, as she was later to learn.

Medicine Reports

Progress in 1933

Poison Antidote, Lung Surgery Are Important Developments

By DR. MORRIS FISHERIN
Editor, Journal American Medical Association and Hygienic, the Health Magazine.

Research in medicine goes on persistently from year to year. It is impossible to say, therefore, that any series of discoveries or observations is definitely a product of a single annual period.

Certain observations were outstanding, however, during 1933, and represented the culmination of investigations carried on previously.

Attention was attracted, particularly, to new methods of treating poisoning by carbon monoxide and by cyanides, these methods involving the injection of an agent called methylene blue. Vast amounts of work done along these lines failed to establish the usefulness of the method, yet the end of the year found it still being reported as effective in some places and attacked as useless in others.

An antidote was announced against bichloride of mercury poisoning. This also is not yet established because of difficulty in making suitable investigations.

Two severe epidemics attracted national interest during 1933. One was the worst epidemic in history of encephalitis lethargica, an inflammation of the brain in which there is constant lethargy, or sleepiness. Nearly 1000 cases of this disease appeared in St. Louis and surrounding territory. There is a tendency toward belief that in some manner this follows certain types of epidemic influenza.

The second epidemic was the appearance of a virulent form of amebic dysentery in two Chicago hotels with a record of more than 500 cases scattered through 170 cities, and with a considerable number of deaths.

This epidemic served to focus the medical attention of the country on dysentery and similar parasitic disorders associated with foods.

Miracles of Surgery

Surgery presented some unusual performances in 1933, including the complete removal of a lung, announced by Drs. Evans Graham of St. Louis and William Kienloft of Baltimore, and removal of a large part of the pancreas because of the presence of tumors.

The surgical operation which seemed to attract most medical attention, however, was the removal of the thyroid gland to relieve undue influence on the heart by secretions of that organ in certain cases of heart disease.

Special attention was given during the year to new gland discoveries. More and more the significance of the glands of internal secretion for health and life is becoming apparent. Experiments are being developed from glands to be used in cases in which there is a deficiency of such glandular substances.

It is known now that the pituitary gland produces substances which affect growth, sex activity and utilization of sugar by the body, and that other secretions from this gland are associated with stimuli to some glands elsewhere in the body and with inhibitions of the actions of other glands.

New Sex Wonders

A sex hormone derived from the excretions is found to have definite effects on the organs of generation. In some cases, removal of the sex glands is compensated for by injection of this hormone.

Treatment with the substance derived from the adrenal glands was found to be increasingly of value in the condition called Addison's disease, formerly invariably fatal.

Experiments were made also on the parathyroid glands and their relationship determined to the growth of bone and to certain convulsive disorders of the human body.

Research on the mechanism of the body for developing insulin and for the metabolism of sugar revealed the fact that there are conditions of hyperinsulinism, or excess insulin, associated with convulsions and other instances with lessened insulin and the condition called diabetes.

Particular importance attached to the research on vitamins, with special attempts to isolate the vitamins, in pure form, or to prepare them synthetically instead of by extracting them from various foods.

As a result, it seems likely that at least one portion of vitamin B has been prepared in crystalline form. It is likely also that work in preparing vitamin C synthetically will be established as scientific.

New methods were developed for treatment and prevention of whooping cough by use of preparations of the organisms associated with this cough. Attempts also were made to develop serums against typhus, fever, and against undulant fever, but the exact values of these new serums is not determined definitely.

Especially significant was new attention devoted to the problem of nutrition. A survey was made to determine whether deficient nutrition prevailed to any extent among children and among workers.

In some sections of the country physicians were convinced that children were in general better nourished at this time than even before the depression. But in other sections, investigators reported that widespread nutritional deficiencies existed among children.

Cancer Still Puzzles

As might be anticipated, vast sums were spent in an attempt to find out more about the cause of cancer and about the value of certain special methods of treatment. Against it was announced that a germ had been discovered for the cause of cancer, but this was not confirmed and the discovery has not been accepted generally.

Increasingly, attention was paid to the possibility of preventing hay fever and asthma by mechanisms which filter the air of rooms and maintain constant temperature and humidity.

Through every life there runs the thread of care. That winds and twists itself about the years; High place or low, it everywhere appears. Not long can man walk pleasure's thoroughfare, Upon his shoulders burdens he must bear. Know doubt and disappointment, failure's fears, And soon or late, pale sorrow's bitter tears. For time from these no favorite will spare. Nor wealth, nor place nor power can keep away The common griefs which age insists upon; Man must have faith and courage to be gay. The joy he seeks is bravely to be won. Who reads the book of life may be assured. The happiest hearts have many an ache endured.—E. A. G.

it," he added, "the knowledge of a certain job or commitment for a given output has resulted in things moving forward. The benefits are clearly visible and their effect will increase markedly during the next six weeks."

Complaints Soon Settled
Mattox was more than optimistic about the success of the NRA on the coast. His organization functions smoothly. There are 45 county chairmen in northern California responsible to him.

So successful have they been in settling complaints from all sides that less than 5 per cent ever come to the attention of the district compliance director. And only seven cases of the thousands which developed have gone to the national compliance division in Washington for final settlement.

NRA officials here have more difficulty with the cleaning and dyeing industry than with any other. Possibly this is due to the fact that outside of the oil industry, it is the only business which has adopted price fixing in its code.

The public definitely is opposed to price fixing. More criticism is heard of the NRA because of the fixed price established by the cleaners and dyers than of any other feature in the administration of the law here.

Price Cutting Attacked
Before the code was signed, "cut rate" cleaning and dyeing plants charged 49 cents for cleaning and pressing a suit. The code set the figure at $1, and this had to be reduced later.

Complaint after complaint came to the compliance office of cleaners who had cut prices in defiance of the code. The case of one flagrant violator has been sent to Washington, with the recommendation that he be dispossessed of his "Blue Eagle."

California's experience with price fixing may prove valuable to NRA administrators in Washington. When the national recovery act was passed, the state legislature was in session, so

Wool Outlook Rosy
Wool growers, about to hold their annual convention at Salt Lake City, expressed themselves as optimistic for the future of the industry. "If the wool market improves, it will not be long before we see daylight," said F. R. Marshall, national secretary of the Wool Growers' Association. Arrangements are being made to handle new federal loans to the industry.

it adopted a little NRA of its own. The CRA (California Recovery Act), as it was called, worked out several codes with price fixing features.

One of these, the barbers' code, brought wholesale criticism. The code fixed the haircut price at 65 cents, the highest ever. Barbers in outlying sections and small towns were compelled to charge the same amount for a haircut as the man in the palatial city hotel shop.

CRA Is Fading Out
The public didn't like it. The business man whose income had been reduced by 50 per cent since 1929 objected to paying pre-depression prices to his barber.

Then the barbers themselves became dissatisfied with the price fixing feature. Less than a month after its adoption, the code was changed to eliminate this objectionable clause. Now it appears as if the CRA soon will be discontinued.

Industrial conflicts have been relatively rare on the coast, but where they have occurred, Creel has stepped in to bring order out of chaos.

Through efforts of his office, working under direction of the National Labor Board in Washington, 38,000 men either have been kept at work through prevention of strikes, or returned to work on their settlement.

Creel has settled six major disputes involving 20,000 men and has averted eight other strikes involving 17,400 men. His toughest assignment was the strike of 10,000 cotton pickers in central California, where men had been killed in rioting in connection with this strike.

Sees Higher Standards
Creel describes the NRA as a revolution of our whole industrial structure along co-operative lines which will bring a higher standard of living to all.

Figures of the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco bear out the claims of Creel and Mattox of tremendous increases in employment and payrolls on the Pacific coast. The latest report released by the bank claimed that in October employment in California was 25 per cent greater than in October last year.

Total payrolls were 15 per cent larger. In Oregon both number of employees and total weekly wages were 40 per cent higher than in October, 1932.

Bank debits for leading cities in Arizona, California, Idaho, Nevada, Oregon, Utah and Washington totaled $1,900,649,000 in October, compared to $1,819,783,000 in the same months of 1932.

In November the 14 leading cities in California alone reported an increase of 4.3 per cent in bank debits.

Trade Gains Slowly
Retail trade has been slower to pick up the nine figures for employment and payrolls would indicate that it would. Department store sales in the Twelfth Federal Reserve district in November were only 3.2 per cent greater than in the corresponding month of last year.

San Francisco reported a gain of 9.8 per cent, but Oakland, Portland, and smaller communities, however, showed wide gains. Stores in medium-sized cities in Washington reporting increase of 22.6 per cent in sales for November. Utah and southern Idaho, typically rural states, reported a gain of 22.8 per cent.

Bank deposits of Federal Reserve member banks in selected cities of the Twelfth district increased from $1,416,000,000 in June to $1,453,000,000 December 13.

Reserve account of member banks with the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco jumped from $144,338,000 in June to $179,338,000 December 13.

RFC Loans Money to Irrigation Districts

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Loans to seven irrigation districts under the emergency farm mortgage act were announced here Monday by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation including one for $18,000 to No. 11 of Jackson county, Newport, Ark.

Reports from Clear Lake, Calif., say thousands of fish are dying from suffocation caused by gases escaping from the bottom of the lake.

A massed band of 200 musicians, Egmonts weighing nearly three with players from six nearby towns pounds each, were exhibited recently at Laredo, Texas.

The tax books for collection of the special assessment upon real property in Street Improvement District No. 6 of the City of Hope, Arkansas, for the purpose of paving those parts of all streets within the boundaries of said district and the streets located therein, reference is herein made to the ordinance creating said district, have been placed in my hands.

All owners of real property lying in said district are required to pay their assessments to me within 30 days from this date. If such payment is not made, action will be commenced at the end of that time for the collection of said assessment and for legal penalties and costs.

This tax may be paid without penalty on or before February 15, 1934, and for the convenience of property owners the undersigned collector will be at the Citizens National Bank, in said city, from the first day of February until the 15th day of February, 1934, both days inclusive, for the purpose of receiving and collecting said tax assessment.

Given under my hand this 1st day of January, 1934.

W. P. AGEE, Collector.
This is not water and sewer district, but street improvement district.
